

BLOG | November is Pancreatic Cancer Awareness Month

Did you know that November is Pancreatic Cancer Awareness Month and that November 21, 2019 is World Pancreatic Cancer Day? Pancreatic cancer is one of the deadliest cancers worldwide and is one of the leading causes of cancer mortality in developing countries (World Health Organization, n.d.). Currently, there is no cure for pancreatic cancer and there are no screening tests to detect this disease, therefore, education and awareness are key to preventing pancreatic cancer. Click on the title above to find out more.

BLOG | ISNCC Board of Directors Call for Nominations

ISNCC is seeking nominations from individuals interested in opportunities to be involved in ISNCC at the Board level. Individuals with experience working with ISNCC or within national cancer nursing societies with experience relevant to the advertised portfolios are encouraged to nominate. Find out more by clicking on the title.

BLOG | Countdown to London 2020 - Episode 3 - 'Birth of Acute Oncology'

As cancer nurses from across the world register for this great event, I thought I would give a flavor for what UK oncology nursing has been focusing on over the last few years. The area of practice I want to explore in this blog is the birth of Acute Oncology (AO) as a specialist area of practice in its own right and how AO services have developed since 2008. Click on the title above to continue reading about this.

Call for ISNCC Blog Submissions

ISNCC encourages oncology nurses to share your insight, knowledge and experiences with other oncology nursing professionals. Oncology nursing professionals are encouraged to contribute articles to be shared on the ISNCC Blog - International Cancer Nursing News (ICNN) site.

If you have an article to publish, click here to review the submission criteria.

