

National Triage Course

Course Information:

The National Triage Course is designed for registered nurses new to triage but not new to emergency nursing. It is recommended that a nurse has at least one year of full-time experience in emergency nursing (or equivalent if part time) before doing this course. The course is run over two 8 hr days and is a mixture of lectures, scenarios and discussion based learning from relevant current information for emergency nursing.

We have recently seen in increased number of nurses from the private sector i.e. Medical A & M's and GP practices. These nurses are looking for full comprehensive courses which support learning and education for professional development requirements and enhance all health care setting environments. As we cover a range of topics including assessment skills & we find that our course meets the needs of nurses from all sectors of the health field.

*The content of course covers assessment and identification of the unwell and injured patient and covers Adult, Paediatric and Mental Health Assessment.

Nursing council of New Zealand require all registered nurses undergo ongoing education and this course can help meet this criteria. Nurses working in isolation find great benefit from the National triage course despite it being specifically based on the triage of patients. It offers a solid base to assessing patients using the Australasian Triage Score.

Components of the course:

- 1. Pre reading and course work (approx 20hrs)
- 2. Two day course with
 - An exam on the pre-course work (pass rate for the exam is 80%)
