PRESENTER:
DEAN COWLES

Māori Nurse Advisor - Nursing Directorate Southern Cross Healthcare

Dean is motivated to inspire transformational change for Māori patients & whānau who enter the private sector. Part of his role is collaborating with key stakeholders across the country to re-indigenise the way in which healthcare is provided.

This webinar encompasses a comprehensive review of key concepts related to Māori health and cultural considerations within the perioperative setting. Dean will firstly delve into current Māori health status within the broader healthcare context, emphasising the differences between The Treaty and Te Tiriti, and advocating for a paradigm shift in healthcare practices. The focus of the session will then shift to understanding the lived experience of Māori individuals in the perioperative setting. The presentation will highlight the importance of incorporating Te Tiriti o Waitangi, specifically Kāwanatanga, Tino Rangatiratanga, Ōritetanga, and Wairuatanga, to promote cultural competence. Furthermore, Dean will outline the necessity for healthcare professionals to grasp the practical components of Te Ao Māori & Tikanga throughout the perioperative patient journey, ensuring a holistic and culturally sensitive approach to healthcare delivery.
