KO JENNI TŌKU INGOA

I have been working in Aotearoa's healthcare system for a long time - more than three decades.

I've served on the frontlines as a nurse, in senior nurse leadership, management roles, and on major projects.

Now I'm CEO of an innovative telehealth company that is providing a patient-centered, alternative route to care.

My nursing and ED experience has made me acutely aware of the health sector's pain points – and I want to ease some of that pressure. Through trying new things and creating change.

MY JOURNEY

The secret of change is to focus all of your energy
not on fighting the old,
but on building the new.

TŌ TĀTOU IWI | OUR PEOPLE

We have been lucky enough to recruit many of Aotearoa's finest Emergency Medicine Specialists (FACEMs). We currently have approximately 30 doctors and the equivalent number of registered nurses (RNs) on staff.

Despite our staff being dispersed across the motu we have fostered a high-performing supportive team spirit. Our clinical team is supported by an operational headquarters in Kirikiriroa Hamilton.

PROUDLY SUPPORTING HEALTHCARE PROVIDERS ACROSS THE MOTU

EASING PRESSURE FROM EDs AND OTHER HEALTH PROVIDERS

We work on the frontlines too and we know how overloaded our health system can get. Burnout has become commonplace as clinical staff struggle to cope with relentless demand. And, with acute hospital presentations growing at twice the rate of our population, it's not going to let up anytime soon. But we can assist our healthcare colleagues by providing an alternate route to care.
