APPENDIX 3 RESOLUTION OF EMPLOYMENT RELATIONSHIP PROBLEMS

1. RESOLUTION OF EMPLOYMENT RELATIONSHIP PROBLEMS

The Employment Relations Act 2000 describes an employment relationship problem as including:

- (a) A personal grievance;
- (b) A dispute; and
- (c) Any other problem relating to or arising out of an employment relationship (but not including any problem about negotiation of employment agreement).

(a) Definitions

The relevant definitions under the Act, which the employee will need to be aware of in the context of the resolution of employment relationship problems:

- Employment Relationship Problem – includes a personal grievance, a dispute, and any other problem relating to or arising out of an employment relationship, but does not include any problem with the fixing of new terms and conditions of employment (for example, bargaining or seeking a variation to an employment contract/agreement).
- Personal Grievance – means any grievance that an employee may have against his/her employer or former employer because of a claim that he/she had been unjustifiably dismissed (actually or constructively), disadvantaged in his/her employment by an unjustifiable action or the employer, discriminated against, sexually harassed, racially harassed or subject to duress in relation to membership/non-membership of a union.
- Dispute – is a dispute about the interpretation, application, or operation of an employment contract/agreement.

(b) Mediation

The Department of Labour operates a mediation service set up specifically to help resolve any employment relationship problems that may arise. The Employee or the Mission may contact the employment mediation service at the Department of Labour to request assistance.

(c) Employment Relations Authority

There is also a body called the Employment Relations Authority. The Authority has offices in Auckland, Wellington and Christchurch. The role of this Authority is to investigate employment problems which are referred to it by establishing the facts and then making a decision it considers to be fair, without regard to technicalities. In most instances the Authority will first insist that the Mission and Employees attempt to resolve the problem by attending mediation before the Authority will itself start to investigate the problem. If either the Employee or the Mission is dissatisfied with the Authority's determination of an employment relationship problem then it can be referred to the Employment Court for a formal hearing.

(d) Personal Grievance Limitation Period

Any Employee who wishes to raise a personal grievance must do so by notifying the Mission within 90 days, beginning with the date on which the action said to amount to a personal grievance occurred, or came to the Employee's attention, whichever is the later. After the 90 days, a personal grievance cannot be raised unless the Mission agrees or the Employment Relations Authority gives permission for the Employee to proceed with the personal grievance.

For personal grievances involving discrimination or sexual harassment, the Employee may be able to make a complaint to the Human Rights Commission, instead of filing a claim with the Employment Relations Authority.

2. STEPS TO HELP RESOLVE AN EMPLOYMENT RELATIONSHIP PROBLEM

(a) First Step: Employer/Manager

The employee should first take the Employment Relationship Problem to his/her (employer/manager). By doing this, it is hoped that the Employment Relationship Problem will be dealt with in a manner that is appropriate to both parties, with the emphasis on allowing the employee to continue on in employment having resolved his/her Employment Relationship Problem.

(b) Second Step: Mediation Service of the Department of Labour/Alternative Disputes Resolution

If the employee's Employment Relationship Problem is not resolved to his/her satisfaction within a reasonable period of time of raising it, the employee or the employer may refer this to:

- (i) The Mediation Service of the Department of Labour. This is an informal institution that provides mediation services to employees and employers alike, or
- (ii) The parties may agree to an independent mediator, arbitration or alternative disputes resolution to help resolve the Employment Relationship Problem.

(c) Third Step: Employment Relations Authority

If the Mediation Service of the Department of Labour, independent mediation, arbitration or alternative disputes resolution cannot resolve the employee's Employment Relationship Problem, then this can be referred through to the Employment Relations Authority. The Employment Relations Authority is an investigative body that has the role of resolving Employment Relationship Problems by establishing the facts and making a determination according to the substantive merits of the case, without regard to technicalities.

APPENDIX 4 TERMINATION OF EMPLOYMENT

TERMINATION OF EMPLOYMENT

1. Investigation:

- (a) Prior to taking disciplinary action the Mission shall in every situation:
- meet with the employee to discuss the situation and allow the employee the opportunity to explain the situation.
 - investigate the situation, if necessary, taking into account the employee's response.
- (b) If, following the investigation, the Mission considers the employee's actions warrant disciplinary action; the Mission shall follow the appropriate procedure set out in this clause.
- (c) The Mission may suspend an employee on pay during any investigation in accordance with the clause. (Prior to making a decision to suspend, the employee would be given an opportunity to discuss the suspension).
- (d) The Mission encourages the employee to bring a support person to disciplinary meetings.

2. Misconduct/Unsatisfactory Performance:

- (a) After carrying out an investigation as described in subclause (a) the Mission considers that the employee's actions constitute misconduct or the employee's performance is unsatisfactory, the Mission shall follow the procedure set out below:
- (b) On the occasion of the first warning the employee shall be advised of:
- the aspect of the behaviour or performance which is unsatisfactory
 - the consequences of continuing unsatisfactory behaviour or performance (on-going employment will be in jeopardy)
 - the actions to take to correct the problem, if applicable
 - the period allowed for an improvement
 - the first warning should also include any commitment that the employee is prepared to give to improve his/her conduct. A sample format is shown in the guidelines.
 - The details of the first warning shall be confirmed in writing.

Note: The object of the first warning is to correct the behaviour or performance and to avert in future more serious disciplinary action.

- (c) The Mission may determine that the employee's actions are such as to warrant the giving of a second warning in the first instance.
- (d) On the occasion of the second warning the procedure shall follow the manner of the first warning but in addition
- the employee shall be advised that continuing unsatisfactory performance or conduct may result in dismissal.
 - A reference to any previous relevant verbal warnings
 - The details of the second warning shall be confirmed in writing by the Mission.
- (e) Copies of all warnings must be given to the employee. A copy must be placed in the employee's personal file. A copy may be forwarded to the employee's representative organisation on request.

3. Serious Misconduct:

- (a) An employee may be dismissed without notice or payment in lieu thereof for serious misconduct in accordance with the provisions of this clause.
- (i) The employee shall be informed of the outcome of the Mission's investigation in accordance with subclause (1) of this clause.
- (ii) In circumstances where the Mission considers the employee's actions amount to serious misconduct the employee may be terminated without notice.
- (iii) Advice of dismissal shall be given by the employer and shall be given in the presence of a witness. The dismissal shall be confirmed in writing.

4. Witness/Representative:

- (a) Where any disciplinary process is actioned, the employee has 24 hours to arrange to be represented if desired.
- (b) The unavailability of a particular person to act as representative shall not be used to frustrate the employer's right to proceed as necessary.
- (c) The employer may suspend an employee on pay during any investigation period.

5. Record of Disciplinary Action:

At each stage of the disciplinary procedure, a record is to be kept. This must be placed on the employee's personal file. A warning has a finite life, which will be advised at the time of issue. This will be for a minimum of six months but may extend to one year, depending on the seriousness of the offence. If the employee works out the specified period of the final notice without re-offending it will be deemed to be lapsed.

Records normally include:

- signed copies of warnings;
- record of the meeting with details of who was present, date, the situation, what took place and agreed actions.

6. Authority to Issue Warnings:FIRST WARNING

A Service Manager may give warnings to staff members who report to them.

SECOND WARNING

Human Relations Manager and other Service Managers are authorised to issue written warnings.

7. Rights of Appeal:

Staff who are the subject of disciplinary action may invoke the "Personal Grievance" provisions contained in their collective employment agreement or as under the Employment Agreement legislation.

Any staff member who considers he or she has received an unjustified or unfair warning or has been subject to unjustified disciplinary action may seek to have the matter reviewed by an appropriate manager.

8. Dismissal Procedure:

To terminate a person's employment, he/she should be informed that his/her employment is being terminated

- of the effective date of termination
- of the reasons for the decision (see below)

Written notice of termination must always be given by means of a letter to the employee and his/her representative organisation. The letter may be either handed to the employee or sent to the employee at his/her home address by registered mail or personal delivery. Letters should be mailed only if it is impractical to hand it to them personally. The reasons given to the employee must be factual and should be brief. It is not possible to give one reason at the time of dismissal and another reason (or additional reason) at a subsequent date.

When leaving the Mission's premises, dismissed employees should have all remuneration due to them. A "final pay" must be made up promptly and handed to the dismissed employee no later than the effective time and date of dismissal.

In cases of instant dismissal, the dismissed employee is entitled only to remuneration earned up to the time of dismissal.

9. Abandonment of Employment:

Where an employee absents him/herself from work for a continuous period exceeding three days without the consent of the Mission or without notification to the Mission, she/he shall be deemed to have terminated her/his employment.
